Rooms-A Complete Outfit Captured.

BALTIMORE, JANUARY I.—Frank B. Jeffries was arrested here to-day for tapping the wires of the Western Union Telegraph Company, which supply the pool-rooms at Arlington, Baltimore country, with reports from the race-tracks. Jeffries is supposed to be connected with the party who were arrested in Washington and released on bail charged with tapping the wires in that city. The police captured a compiler office outfit, including a bettery of fifty cells, two instruments, and fifty pounds of wire.

REDUCED NEWSPAPER RATES. The Courier-Journal Creates a Sensation

[By telegraph to the Dispatch.]

Louisville, Kr., January L.—A sensation among newspaper renders was caused to-day by the reduction of the price of the Courier-Jaurnal from twenty and thirty cents per week to fourteen and twenty cents and $10 and $12 per year to $8 and $10 an $10. The Convier-Journal's strength makes this action indicative of the general tendency consequent upon the improvements in the tacilities for printing, which this paper has always been the first to use.

RICHMOND, VA., FRIDAY, JANUARY 2, 1891.

JUSTICE CRUTCHFIELD'S NEW-YEAR. The Docket Before the Police Court Yesterday a Very Light One.

There was an unusually light docket in the Police Court yesterday.

Bill Robinson ains Ned Jackson, a notorious thief, who was just discharged from juil last Friday, was charged with stealing a box of cigars, valued at $4, which he sold to Mr. Joseph Beckman for 75 cents.

Mr. Beckman, suspecting the negro had stolen the cigars, reported the fact to the police. While the officers were looking for the accused he pand a visit to Mr. Christian's store and stole a can of lard. The porter in the store saw Robinson as he was going out with the lard, followed him up the street, and having captured him, turned him over to the police.

The accused was identified by Mr. Beckman as the man who sold him the cigars.

Robinson was given ninety days in jul for each case and required to give security for his good behavior for twelve months.

A driver of Thomas R. Thompson was charged with overloading his team.

Policeman Sutton testified that the man had ten barrels of whiskey on the wagon last Saturday, and the houses could not pull the load.

Mr. R. M. Taylor stated that a barrel of whiskey weighed about 400 pounds, and that ten were a load for a two-horse truck. ere was an unusually light docket in Arranging for the Dancing.

Mrs. William L. Royall, as committee on dancing for the large ball to be given January 2th for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities, is very busy making her arrangements for the "Sir Roger de Coverly," which is to be the dance of the evening. She will have all the most popular young ladies and gentlemen in town to take part. The same costumes will be down in time for the young men, and the ladies are to look lovely in the shortwaisted dresses of their grandmothers. A list of the dancers will be published soon.

Board of Directors Meet. An adjourned meeting of the Board of Directors of the Young Men's Christian Association was held Wednesday evening in the office of the Virginia State Insurance Company. The meeting was called for the purpose of hearing reports from committees who had been canvassing for subscriptions to the building fund. The reports were encouraging, and from the present outlook the association will be free of debt in the near funne.

The expression was very general that our people did wonderfully well in the twelve months just closed, and the outlook for the future was never so bright. Our business-men were in an easy state of mind, and the compliments of the season were exchanged with great heartiness and cheer.

Over 800 deeds were recorded in Manchester during the past year. One deed recorded in January from the Richmond and Danville railroad to a trust company was for $5,000,000. In October a deed from the Scuthside Land and Improvement Company to the Richmond and Manchester Railroad Company for $150,000 was admitted to record.

During the past year 110 marriage licenses were issued—75 to white and 35 to negro couples. This is an increase of 15 over 1889.

The police force made 1,183 arrests during 1890—28 for felony, 202 for misdemeanors, and 863 for ordinance violations.

convention was held here in November last.

It is therefore gratifying to know that the expressions of appreciation of Richmond's hospitality which fell so generally from the lips of the visitors during their stay were not "mere words" and passing courtesies, but were genuine and echoed sentiments that abide. Froof that this was the case has been forthcoming not only in letters received from fellow-members by members of the society residing here, but in articles contributed by some of the visitors to the press. Among these articles is one by Mr. J. F. Holloway which appears in the last issue of The Iron Trade Review. Mr. Holloway was by common consent rather regarded as the wit of the society, but his letter shows that there is a deep unjecurrent in his character.

WHOLE-BOULED HOSPITALITY.

Mr. Holloway, after explaining that he knew that the engineers and their better-halves would be gratified to see an acknowledgment of the whole-souled, hospitable manner in which the society were received by Richmond's best citizens.

were received by Richmond's best childens, says;

"The eloquent address in which his Honor J. Taylor Ellyson, Mayor of Richmond, greeted and welcomed the engineers and their guests to their city, if wider known, would have warmed other hearts as it did those who latened to him. His reterence to the old times, in which the young men of Virginia were trained to politics, to discussions of taxation and finance, etc., while it had in tone and thought a shade of tender recollection, was soon changed to a cherry hopefulness for the future, now that the rising generation were being taught in manual training schools and mechanical institutions to direct their thoughts and energies in other and more useful occupations.

moved, the shafts and pulleys chily showing what it had been, with freshly-whitewashed walls and beams to garnish it for the festival, long lines of tables were spread with a bounteous feast of good timings, both solid and fluid; and while the Tredegar Works, like many another old-timer, has had its may and downs, all voted it a glorious success that day. After a long and vigorous onshaught, such as only engineers can make when well-spread tables tempt them, there came a halt, and knife and fork and busy tongues held silence while the venerade preculent of the company, General Anderson, who at the age of eighty years looked backward over a life spent within its works, and in charge in various capacities of its affairs, gave at the request of the guests present a brief history of the establishment. Outlining its early beginning, and naming its early beginning, and naming its outled up with tender recollection his associates and metad out to each his award of praise for all they had done to lighten his labors in the past; and as he recited how the grave had long since claimed so of praise for all they had done to lighten his labors in the past; and as he recited how the grave had long since claimed so many of them, his voice grew low and tremulous, and the stillness that reigned all about gave testimony that in other hearts by-gone remembrances brought back tender thoughts as well. Responses by President Oberlin Smith and others re-vived the duties and scenes of the present to such an extent that the very rafters were made to ring with cheers for General An-derson, the Tredegar Works, and its em-ployes.

"After this sought-for correspondent bad well accomplished the description of these scenes and events, I would have had him try his hand at describing the reception and supper given by the chizens under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce, in the Richmond Thestre, the parquet of which was floored over and its balconies and boxes decorated for the occasion. Here again Virginia's capital turned out its handsome women and most noted business men, and to soft music light-tripping feet wove involute curves over the newly-haid floor, in which the gallantry of the mechanical engineers found scope and pleasure in leading out the daughters of the sunny South. In an adjoining building elegantly-arranged supper-tables invited attention—and received it, too. Amid the merry clatter of plates that were filled and handed about by the business-men of Richmond, who, so jeal-ous were they of the honor of here entertaining the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, that even in the arrangement and decorations of the tables they would not permit woman's hand or woman's taste to share it with them. DOWN THE RIVER.

Mr. Holloway also describes the trip of the engineers down James river to the monitors and the discovery in his party of the engineer who had worked the turret machinery of one of the ironclads during the siege of Charleston, and concludes his letter as follows:

"The luncheons have been esten, the band has gone ashore, and the mechanical engineers who had the good fortune to attend the Richmond meeting of 1880 have scattered far and wide, but be they where they may they will long hold in pleasant remembrance the hospitable welcome and kindly entertainment they received in Virginia's capital, and none will wish more earnestly than they that in the near future, aided by the genius and skill of the engineer and the labors of the artisan, there shall rise above the ruins of a by-gone dynasty a splendid city, where wealth wrung from the hidden treasures of earth shall bless not only its possessors but as well the entire community and the world at large."

Young Folkes leaves a widow and one child. Some time after his marriage, which occurred several years ago, he joined the United States army. He returned to Richmond last spring and for a short time worked at his trade—painting. More latterly he secured a position on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, which he was filling when killed.

The news of the accident was received yesterday by the mother of the dead man by telegraph. Her grief was something awful, and kind friends showed her as best they could their deep sympathy in the deep affliction visited upon her.

To the Editor of the Dispatch:

Your 1st of January issue filled with valuable information of the growth of our beautiful city, I enjoyed very much, but regret that I did not furnish you with the report of a new manufacturing enterprise at "South Richmond" which has grown until it should be recognized among our prominent industries. It is the Chatsworth stock and dairy farm, located three miles south of Richmond on the north bank of the James. This farm with 170 cowe produced during the month of December 82,538 pounds of milk, or 971,741 gallons, which was sold wholessie in Richmond for $1,740.13. I venture the prediction that the day is not far distant when this place and Warwick Park will be called "Couth Richmond," and be to Richmond what the poet of Richmond, Pa., is to Paindalphis, its terminus for deep water and dry dockar, James river is twenty-five feet deep at this point, and with little cost this depth can be maintained to the sea, while it will take many millions of dollars to bring this water three miles through beds of granite to Richmond. Yours very respectfully.

JOHN HARVIE CRAFFIS,

Stockholders' Meeting-Ten Per Cent.

Pursuant to a call there was a general meeting of the stockholders of the Chesapeake and Obio Development Company in the company's office at Clifton Forge, Va., Saturday, December 37, 1890.

On motion of Captain C. L., Adams, Mr., Decetur Axtell was made chairman and B. E. Hughes, secretary. The president, Mr., Axtell, read his report which was very encouraging and gratifying to the stockholders.
